So I've been banned from the College Republicans by RINO agitators who can't follow their own bylaws.

Over the summer, Mekenna Carman resigned as Secretary and moved to Washington DC. Jennifer Custis, our club President during the first meeting of the year on 8/24, announced there would be a special election to fill her vacancy. Jennifer ruled unilaterally that "only those who showed up for the 8/24 meeting would be qualified to vote" in the following week. This is problematic for several reasons.

1) Out of the four who have declared their intent to run, three of them are freshmen who have never participated in a CR meeting prior.

2) This is a blatant violation of the CR Constitution.

According to the CR Constitution,

<http://www.asurepublicans.com/club-constitution.html>

Article VI: Elections, In the event a special election to fill a vacancy shall occur, nominations shall be solicited at the soonest possible meeting following the vacancy. The provisions of Article VI(A)(iii) shall govern the conduct of the special election, which states: Any individual who does not meet the qualifications for voting according to Article III shall not be allowed to cast a vote.

According to Article III, membership is granted once two of the following have been achieved.

- A) Payment of Dues,
- B) Tabled five times,
- C) Attended four meetings in the last semester.

3) Jennifer has admitted this was done in order to disenfranchise core members in order to ensure a particular candidate won that election due to her personal relationship with him. Due to the large attendance of Freshmen and Sorority friends brought in during those two weeks, ensured her candidate would win that vote.

We contacted our sponsor, Dr Donald Critchlow, and informed him of Jennifer's error. He met with her and came up with a fair compromise to push the election out by a couple of weeks so freshmen could qualify by the constitution and older core members could vote. When Critchlow announced this to the club on 9/7, Jennifer publicly argued with him and stormed out of the room. Later that week Jennifer decided to cancel the election, because she realized she no longer had the votes. Jennifer informed the club that McKenna will not be stepping down as secretary even though she is currently living out of state and would not return anytime this year. In addition to this Jennifer, will be creating a new position; a "Director of Membership" and would appoint that same candidate she endorsed previously to the position. This director will basically fill the role of Secretary, completely bypassing the election.

We were ready to approach Student Services by this point, but decided to speak with Jennifer directly one last time to express our concerns with her. We again came up with another compromise, we would give Jennifer a clean slate and would start up a committee to reform the constitution to make it simpler and more efficient. In return Jennifer would start abiding by the rules and would honor her commitments.

These efforts ultimately proved to be a waste of time as Jennifer's board began to personally attack members who did not agree with how she was handling the situation. Jennifer's executive board has lied about being banned by ASU from tabling. When members spoke out against this false information, or complained about the Vice President and Secretary's absence, or her other corruption, she started banning members who opposed her. This is not the first time this has happened as she has banned politicians who are currently seeking office from attending CR events due to personal vendettas. Kelli Ward's crime was that she did not endorse her ticket last semester. This is petty childish behavior unbecoming of a College Republican.

Ethan Clay How is breaking the constitution to rig elections literally a yearly occurrence in your club?

Ethan Clay Those stories are lost deep in the annals of history.

Rick Thomas there needs to be more oversight in that group. There's too much power in the executive board for them to turn it into a country club for a particular clique.

Jacob Pritchett Ooh ooh. Once the state federation literally started a second CR's club at ASU to sabotage the original one. Then they started writing the school newspaper and telling them that they weren't allowed to call the original club a CR club. That was pretty funny.

Wow · Reply · 🗳️👉 6 · October 6 at 4:23pm

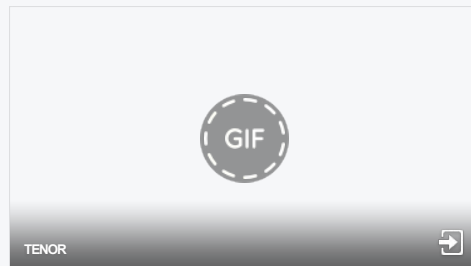

Rick Thomas is that why there's a line in the constitution that basically allows the CRs to disassociate with the Federation/national chapters if they wanted to?

Richard Moorhead Without getting involved, I would tell Ethan that most of the election craziness that has occurred with the CRs over the years had more to do with manipulating the club constitution as opposed to breaking it. Signing up a load of randos just for an election to get control.

Like · Reply · 🗳️ 7 · October 6 at 5:30pm

Jacob Pritchett Everyone signed on randos. Even if only to compete with other people's randos. Consequences of poor organization (which is admittedly hard to avoid with a college club with heavy leadership turnover).

Jacob Pritchett It's usually not a big deal in most clubs, but in the CR's there's all the drama on top of it.

Like · Reply · 🗳️ 2 · October 6 at 5:35pm

Ethan Clay I've heard of a lot of both forms from people over the years. Either way your elections and inter-club drama is sure as hell some of the most interesting on campus.

Like · Reply · 🗳️ 6 · October 6 at 5:37pm

Rick Thomas Jacob Pritchett that happened last election too. Sorority sisters and actual democrats. The constitution was modified to require a certain amount of tabling and meetings to filter that out but it still went down. The part about (in the last semester) was ignored

Richard Moorhead Having seen it happen numerous times there were differences in severity. Difference between recruiting a few potentially interested kids to show up and vote as opposed to having a block of YD's register to vote in a CR election. I believe Kevin changed it to 4 meetings to be eligible to vote, which makes more sense
